The story of how Part II came to be begins abroad. Chef Peter Gusso and his wife travelled and worked together in Great Britain for five years, absorbing as much culinary tradition as they could from wherever they found themselves – always thinking that eventually they could draw from those different culinary experiences and create new, interesting and well presented cuisine in their own venue. Only when they came back to their home in Blyth, did they realize it was time to open their own bistro...it was time for PART II.
